Mercedes-Benz and AMG Voted Best Engines

Mercedes-Benz and AMG won several key awards at the recent International Engine of the Year Awards 2009 by winning the categories for Best Performance Engine, Best Engine Above 4-litre and Best Engine Between 2.2-5litre. The International Engine of the Year Awards 2009 are presented by UKIP Media & Events

Automotive Magazines, Britain's largest group of technical motoring publications. The company receives no advertising or financial support from any car manufacturer or distributor.

Best Performance Engine category- Mercedes-AMG 6.2-litre

Technology has been stretched to its limits to create the most powerful naturally-aspirated V8 engine in its class, with up to 525bhp and 630Nm of torque, depending on application - enough to ensure acceleration from 0-100km/h (0-62mph) in a mere 4.6 seconds. In fact, Mercedes has put this AMG unit to good use. The powerplant is available in various states of tune, ranging from 451bhp in the CLK up to 518bhp in the CL, and is built in the AMG engine shop on the 'one man, one engine' principle, with one technician being responsible for hand-assembling a complete engine.

What makes the engine unusual is that its motorsport DNA has made it a high-revving, large-displacement beast, due to its lightweight, rigid closed-deck crankcase and its cylinder walls with revolutionary LDS coating, as well as valve gear with bucket-type tappets in the cylinder heads for high engine speeds.
