Dr. Thomas Barnardo

Dr. Thomas John Barnardo, was the founder of many homes for poor children and started the charity Barnardo's. From the time of his first home in 1870 until his death in 1905, Dr. Barnardo helped nearly 100,000 children through good care and education, Dr. Barnardo was one of the most significant and important people in the Victoria era and he is well known to this day for the work he did with Victorian children to rescue them, train them and give them better lives.

Interesting Facts

Thomas John Barnardo was born on July 4, 1845 in Dublin, Ireland and he died on September 19, 1905.

When he was sixteen years old, he wanted to become a Protestant medical missionary in China. He moved to London in order to train to be a doctor. He studied at the London Hospital, but never actually completed the course. Although he is known as 'Doctor' Barnardo, he never actually qualified as a doctor.

During his time in London, Thomas Barnardo became interested in the lives of the Victorian poor. He was appalled by the number of people living on the streets of London and he witnessed the horrific effects of cholera, unemployment and overcrowding.

This was at a time where children worked in factories and did other dangerous jobs like chimney sweeping.

Barnardo put aside his plans to visit China. He opened his first Ragged School in the East End of London in 1867, to educate and care for poor orphans.

These charities gave free education to poor children in the Victorian era. Around 300,000 children went through the London ragged schools between 1844 and 1881.

One of his pupils, a boy called Jim Jarvis, took Barnardo on a walk of the East End, showing him the sheer number of poor children sleeping on roofs and gutters. Barnardo was so moved by the sight that he decided to do something about it.

In 1870, Thomas Barnardo opened his first home for boys in Stepney Causeway, providing shelter for orphans and destitute children. They trained boys in carpentry, metalwork and shoemaking. These were skills that the boys could use to secure an apprenticeship and work.

A sign hung on the building which said: 'No Destitute Child Ever Refused Admission'.

Barnardo founded the Girls' Village Home after his marriage in 1873. Located in Barkingside, the 'village' consisted of a collection of cottages and was home to 1500 poor girls.

By 1900 there were 65 cottages at the home, as well as a school, a hospital and a church with three village greens.

Thomas and his wife Syrie had seven children. Their daughter Marjorie was born with Down's Syndrome.

Dr. Barnardo

His experience caring for her influenced Barnardo's approach to helping disabled children. The charity accepted children with physical or learning disabilities and had specialist homes for children with disabilities.

During his life Barnardo continued to open institutions that helped to care for poor children. By his death in 1905, it is estimated that his homes and schools cared for over 8,000 children in more than 90 different locations.

The Barnardo's charity is still going strong today – nearly 150 years after Barnardo opened the first boys home.
